* MARK: Names.—John Mark—Acts 12:12, 25; 15:37. The Jewish name John alone—John 13:5, 13. The Roman name Mark alone—Acts 15:39; Col. 4:10; Philemon 24; I Pet. 5:13; II Tim. 4:11. Cf. Jewish and Roman names combined in Saul Paul.

Home.—Jerusalem and mother's name Mary—Acts 12:12, 25. This home the place where many Disciples gathered for Prayer—Acts 12:12 ff.

Cousin of Barnabas.—Col. 4:10, and so possibly a native of Cyprus, and possibly also a Levite like Barnabas (if father a brother of Barnabas). Cf. Acts 3:36.

Uncertain whether Personal Follower of Jesus.—Some consider him the young man mentioned in Mk. 14:51 f. This is quite possible if the "upper room" was in his mother's house—Mk. 14:15. Cf. Acts 12:12. But certainly a Christian when name first mentioned in Acts.

Goes to Antioch with Barnabas and Saul.—Acts 12:25. Probably invited by Barnabas, the leader of the new work among the Greeks at Antioch. As a cousin of Barnabas, and probably a Hellenistic Jew, he would be interested in the new developments there.

Assistant to Barnabas and Saul.—Acts 13:5. Either subordinate or possibly "synagogue minister" (Chase, Hastings' Bible Dictionary).

Leaves Paul and Barnabas at Perga.—Acts 13:13. Returns to Jerusalem—Acts 13:13. Refused by Paul as companion for Second Missionary Tour—Acts 15:37 f. Follows Barnabas to Cyprus—Acts 37:39. Fellow-worker of Paul in Rome—Philemon 24. Commended by Paul to the Colossians—

Col. 4:10. With Peter in Babylon (Rome?)—I Pet. 5:13. Desired by Paul in last imprisonment along with Timothy—II Tim. 4:11.

Peter's Interpreter.—So Papias as quoted in Eusebius (II. E. iii. 39). Cf. Swete on Mark, p. xviii. This old tradition in harmony with association with Peter (I Pet. 5:13) and Peter's expressed wish to help the readers of his second Epistle (I Pet. 1:15) to "be able to call these things to remembrance" after his decease. Character of the Gospel of Mark in harmony also with story of Papias that Mark, as Peter's interpreter, wrote down accurately what he remembered of the Words and Deeds of Jesus.

GOSPEL OF MARK: Date of the Gospel of Mark.—The general opinion among modern students of the Synoptic Problem is that the Gospel of Mark is a genuine Work and the earliest of the Four Gospels. Swete, p. xxxv, thinks that it cannot be later than A. D. 70. It may indeed quite possibly be between 55 and 60 A. D.

Place of Writing.—This is not known, but is usually supposed to be Rome. We have seen Mark in Rome with Paul (Philemon 24) and probably with Peter (I Pet. 5:13). But one cannot be positive when nothing is told.

Characteristics of the Gospel of Mark.—For Romans especially. This is the early tradition, and it is supported by the probable fact that it was written in Rome. There is also a distinct absence of peculiar Jewish features such as are seen in the Gospel of Matthew. No Jewish genealogy occurs here.

Humanity of Jesus accented.—This Gospel is not therefore a theological treatise after the order of Matthew, though the conception of Christ is the same. He is "Jesus Christ, the Son of God" (Mk. 1:1), whose Gospel is here narrated. He is divine as well as human.

Beginning of Christ's Gospel, not of His Life.—Mk. 1:1. Mark does not narrate the birth and childhood of Jesus. He even skips the first year of His ministry after His baptism. Possibly a year (according to John's gospel) comes in between verse 13 and 14 in Chap. 1.

Mainly the Galilean Gospel.—1:14-9:50, counting the period of withdrawal into regions around Galilee.

Climax in Jerusalem during the Last Passover.—Chaps. 11-16. Galilee and Jerusalem, the two foci of Christ's Ministry, according to Mark. This is precisely what Peter does in his sketch of Christ's work in His early apostolic preaching. The work and death of Christ (and resurrection) the main elements in the earliest preaching.

Deeds of Jesus rather than His Words.—Hence the miracles are numerous in Mark. Same number (18) as that in Matthew and only 20 in Luke. But Mark has only 4 Parables, while Matthew has 15. The sayings of Christ seem to have been first collected into a group of Logia. Mark represents the crisp record of His deeds.

Person of Christ in Action.—Thus he teaches the truth about Jesus. There is rapid movement, power, results. Jesus is shown to be the Son of God, with divine power. The Greek adverb εὐθύς (straightway) occurs forty-one times in Mark. There are 151 "historic presents" in Mark, while only 78 in Matthew, and not over 6 in Luke (list of Westcott and Hort). Cf. Hawkins, Horae Synopticae, p. 114 ff. Energy is the word that best describes Mark's narratives. The ancients compared Mark's Gospel to the lion.

Vividness of Detail.—There are constant changes of tense in Mark, due to vividness of conception. Cf. 5:15 ff.; 6:14 ff. &c. As the reporter of Peter's descriptions there are naturally marks of an eye-witness—7:17; 10:17; 12:41. These vivid details come out particularly in story of the demoniac in the rocks (Mk. 5:1-20) where many items are alone in Mark. This pictorial autoptic character of the Gospel is in harmony with notion of its early date and Petrine influence. Mark tells of the gestures of Jesus (9:36), looks of Jesus (5:32; 6:6, &c.), love for the young ruler and his look of despondency (10:21 f.), &c. After Peter's denial these details are fewer. The matters that would tend to recall Peter are usually absent from the Gospel.

Emotions of Jesus.—Sternness (1:43), Anger (3:5), Wonder (6:6), Indignation (10:14), Amazement in the Garden of Gethsemane (14:33 f.).

Deity of Christ.—Yet withal no Gospel gives a stronger impression of the deity of Jesus, not even John's Gospel. This comes out in the claims of Jesus as Lord of the Sabbath

(2:28), with power to forgive sins (2:5, 10), with power and glory (14:62), &c.

Pauline Character.—Pfleiderer holds that this Gospel represents the Pauline gospel of grace for all men, both Gentile and Jew. This is true, but it is also true of every book in the New Testament. They are all Pauline in that sense, that Paul rightly interpreted the mind of Christ on the point of Gentile freedom.

Independent Matter in Mark.—There are only some eighty verses (Swete, Comm., p. lxxviii.) in Mark not in the Synoptic Gospels. But in the matters reported by him, brief as his Gospel is, he is usually fuller than the other Gospels, another sign of Peter's descriptive powers as reported by Mark. Chief matters in Mark alone occur in 3:20 f.; 4:26-29; 7:31-37; 8:26-28; 14:51 ff.

Chronological Order.—So almost uniformly in this Gospel as in Luke. But his Gospel is no more a history than the others are.

Explanation by Mark.—He gives the Aramaic a few times and then translates into Greek as in 5:41; 7:11, 34; &c. Sometimes he explains the conduct of Christ as in 5:30; 8:19. He uses rather more Latin words than the other Gospels, like denarius, legion, centurion, &c.

Quotations from the Old Testament.—There are 67 references in Mark to the Old Testament, 23 merely verbal allusions and only 7 peculiar to Mark. Mark's more formal quotations are found in 1:2, 3; 4:12, 32; 7:6, 7, 10; 8:18; 9:48; 10:4, 6, 7, 8, 19, 27; 11:9; 12:2, 10, 11, 19, 31, 36; 13:12, 14, 19, 24, 26; 14:27, 34, 62.

Special Phrases.—Besides the vivid terms and adverbs in Mark already mentioned, a few others call for mention. Constant use of the first person as in 4:39; 5:8, 9, 12; 6:2, &c. He uses many diminutives. It is in the vernacular Greek of the time, and the conversational style is apparent all through the book. The vocabulary is not peculiar at all, though a few unusual words occur as in 9:47.

Gospel for Children.—As the earliest and simplest Gospel, Mark is the favorite of the children, and is best adapted for them. Around this simple objective picture of Jesus at work among men, it is easy to group the other Gospels (Matthew, Luke and John).

Teaching of Mark.—It is only necessary to say that the picture of Jesus is at the bottom the same in Mark that we find elsewhere. He gave his life a ransom for men (10:45; 14:24). His power is compassionate and beneficial, not destructive. Jesus is not merely the Great Teacher, but the Great Worker. His miracles are acted parables and his deeds speak louder than any words.

* HELL.—Gr. Gehenna, "Valley of Hinnom." From Heb. Gē, "Valley," and "Hinnom," name of the owner. (West of Jerusalem, where noxious things were burned up.) them, <sup>1</sup> What did <sup>a</sup> Mō-šēs command you? 4 And they said, Mō-šēs suffered to <sup>b</sup> write a bill of <sup>c</sup> divorce, and to put <sup>d</sup> her away. 5 But Jē-šūs said unto them, <sup>e</sup> For your <sup>f</sup> hardness of <sup>g</sup> heart he wrote you this commandment. 6 But <sup>h</sup> from the <sup>i</sup> beginning of the <sup>j</sup> creation, <sup>k</sup> Male and female made he them. 7 <sup>m</sup> For this cause shall a <sup>n</sup> man leave his <sup>p</sup> father and <sup>q</sup> mother, <sup>r</sup> and shall cleave to his wife; 8 and the <sup>s</sup> two shall become one <sup>t</sup> flesh: so that they are no more two, but one flesh. 9 What therefore <sup>u</sup> God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. 10 And in the <sup>v</sup> house the <sup>w</sup> disciples asked him again of this matter. 11 And he saith unto them, <sup>x</sup> Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth <sup>y</sup> adultery against her: 12 and <sup>z</sup> if she herself shall put away her husband, and marry another, she committeth adultery.

Not in A. R. v. N. T. usage.

(1) "Hades" translated "Hell" ten times in a. v. ("death" once) is transferred "Hades" in a. r. v. ten times ("death" once). Sometimes "Hades" is used in context where it is clear that the abode of the wicked is meant. (Cf. Lu. 16:23, "in Hades," "in torments;" Death and Hades cast into the Lake of Fire—Rev. 20:14. English Word "Hell" is from Anglo-Saxon helan, to hide, conceal. Originally the other World, like "Hades" the "Unseen" World, then confined to the abode of the damned.

(2) "Tartarus" used but once, limited to Evil Angels, is retained in A. R. v. II Pet. 2:4.

(3) "Gehenna" used eleven times by Jesus, once by James and by no others, is translated "Hell" uniformly. See "Fire"—Lev. 10:2. "Punishment"—Gen. 39:20. "Sheol"—Job 7:9. "The Judgment"—II Pet. 2:4. "Destruction"—Hos. 13:14. "Death"—Rom. 5:12.

17 <sup>r</sup> s And as he was going forth <sup>t</sup> into the way, there ran one to him, and <sup>u</sup> kneeled to him, and asked him, Good <sup>v</sup> w Teacher, what shall I do that I may <sup>x</sup> inherit <sup>y</sup> eternal life? 18 And Jē-šūs said unto him, Why callest thou me <sup>a</sup> good? <sup>b</sup> none is good save one, even God. 19 Thou knowest the <sup>c</sup> command-ligious sect. This matter is not clear. But certainly they represent those under Roman rule who wished for a restoration of the rule of the Herods, probably under Herod Antipas. Hence in Galilee (Mk. 3:6) Jesus warned the disciples against the heaven of Herod Antipas (Mk. 8:15), but this need not have been either that of the Pharisees or of the Sadducees (Mt. 16:6). A distinction seems to be drawn between the Herodians and both Pharisees and Sadducees in—Mt. 22:15 f., 23; Mk. 12:13, 18; Lu. 20:20, 27. As in Mk. 3:6, so here they join with the Pharisees in attacking Jesus about tribute to Cæsar. As advocates of the dynasty of Herod they opposed paying taxes to Rome.

Grecian, or Greek-speaking Jews.—In Acts 6:1, a distinction is made between the Christian Jews who belonged to the Dispersion and spoke Greek (Hellenists) and the Christian Jews who were Palestinian and spoke Aramaic (Hebrews). The term Hellenist occurs also in Acts 9:29 for Jews of the Dispersion now in Jerusalem, while in Acts 11:20 the American Standard Version correctly reads "Greeks also," not Jews at all. For Greek in the usual, non-Jewish sense see Acts 16:1; 18:4; Rom. 1:14, 16; 10:12; John 12:20; Gal. 3:28.

they could do nothing, they said unto the governor, We beseech thee, that we may crucify him.
But the governor answered them,
I cannot; for I am a Jew. And the governor's wife said unto him,
I beseech thee, that thou mayest not crucify him; for I have seen him to-day, and he is without guilt. And when they had crucified him, they parted his clothes, and cast lots. And all the multitude began to revile him, saying, He if he be the King of Israel. And one of the soldiers with a reed struck his head, and said unto him,

*LUKE: Name.—Not the same as Lucius in Acts 13:1. Probably an abbreviated pet name from Lucanus, a common custom of the time with many names. The name occurs only three times in the New Testament. (Philemon 24, Col. 4:14; II Tim. 4:11.)

Birthplace.—Absolutely unknown. Antioch in Syria, Antioch in Pisidia, Philippi in Macedonia have all been suggested.

Home.—Luke lived in Philippi apparently, from Paul's first visit there (Acts 16:12; 17:1) till Paul's return by Philippi on his way to Jerusalem during the third tour (Acts 20:5 f.). This is apparent from the use of "we" and "they." It is possible indeed that Luke had come from Macedonia to Troas and that his visit led to Paul's vision recorded in Acts 16:10 f. Luke shows unusual interest in Philippi, manifesting local pride in its claim to "first" as opposed to Amphipolis (Acts 16:12).

Family.—Also unknown, unless Titus is his brother. Curiously, neither Luke nor Titus are mentioned in Acts. Luke is not mentioned because he wrote the book. Why not Titus? Cf. II Cor. 12:18. Paul mentions "the brother" in connection with Titus where he seems to mean "his brother."

A. Souter (Hastings' D. B.) considers this passage and II Cor. 8:18 proof that Luke is this brother (cf. Acts above). If so, we have this interesting detail.

Gentile.—Titus was a Greek (Gal. 2:3). If Luke was his brother, he would be, of course, Greek also. The failure to mention Luke in the list of Jewish brethren (Col. 4:10 f.), putting him apart with Greek names in Col. 4:14 f., indicates that he was not a Jew. Luke's Greek style (Lu. 1:1-4), when un-influenced by his Aramaic or Jewish sources, corroborates this idea.

Man of Culture.—His two books (Gospel and Acts) show him to be a man of education. His introduction to his Gospel is worthy of any historian. He has the historian's skill in the use of his material.

Physician.—Expressly called by Paul (Col. 4:14) "Luke, the beloved physician." Many current medical terms in both Gospel and Acts. Cf. Hobart, "The Medical Language of Luke."

Companion of Paul.—He was with Paul at Troas and Philippi during Second Missionary Tour—Acts 16:10-40. He joins Paul again at Philippi on his third tour en route to Jerusalem (Acts 20:7) and is with him at Jerusalem, Cæsarea,

8 Now it came to pass, while
<sup>e</sup> before <sup>f</sup> God in the order of his was <sup>g</sup> to enter into the <sup>h</sup> temple of the Lord and burn <sup>i</sup> incense.

 10 And the whole multitude of the people were <sup>j</sup> praying <sup>k</sup> without at the <sup>l</sup> hour of incense. 11
 And there appeared unto him

voyage to Rome (Acts 20-28). If II Cor. 8:18 and 12:18 refer to Luke, he was in Macedonia with Paul also when in Macedonia during the third tour on his way from Ephesus to Corinth via Macedonia. Luke was with Paul most of the first imprisonment in Rome—Phil. 24; Col. 1:14. He was with him again in the Second Imprisonment—II Tim. 4:11.

Not a Personal Disciple of Jesus.—Some have supposed that he was one of the "Seventy" sent out by Jesus, others have thought him one of the two disciples to whom Jesus appeared on the way to Emmaus; others have thought that he was one of the Greeks who came to see Jesus (John 12:20). But there is no support for any of these ideas. Others think that he was led to Christ by Paul and that he was Paul's physician when he was taken sick in Galatia (Gal. 4:13). The implication in Lu. 1:1-4 is that Luke did not know Jesus personally.

Legend that he was a Painter.—That is possible, but no real proof of it exists. He has great literary skill at any rate.

Harnack's Admission about Luke.—It is now admitted by Harnack that Luke wrote both Gospel and Acts. This is a victory for solid interpretation. Cf. Harnack, "Luke the Physician," Ramsay, "Luke the Physician."

Same Author for Gospel and Acts.—This is plain from Lu. 1:1-4 and Acts 1:1, as well as from the general style of both books. The vocabulary is largely the same.

Luke a Reliable Historian.—Sir W. M. Ramsay's various books on Luke and Paul have proven the great value of Luke as an historian. He has been shown by discoveries to be right on various items where once he seemed to stand alone—such as the proconsul of Cyprus, the politarchs of Thessalonica, the "First" man of Melita, &c.

Explanation of Method of Work.—In his introduction to his Gospel (1:1-4) he explains his use of his materials. He sought information from oral and written sources. He wished first-hand testimony (eye-witness) whenever he could get it. He tested it all himself, put it in order, and sought to be accurate.

Main Known Sources.—It seems clear that Luke had the Gospel of Mark among his written sources. He seems to have had a book of Logia or Sayings of Jesus, and also the present Matthew. Then he apparently had another source different from both of them. The inference is from his own words that he had a rather large amount of material in hand.

Date of Luke's Gospel.—This matter is not perfectly clear, though scholars see more nearly together about it now. It must come after Mark and the Logia. It must come before the Acts. If Acts was written while Luke was in Rome during the first imprisonment, the conclusion would be easy. That is the most natural meaning of Luke's words in Acts 28:30. He closes Acts after two years in Rome because the events had gone no further. The other view makes Luke's close of Acts merely an artistic one. He had it in mind to bring Paul to Rome. If the first view is correct, the Gospel was written during the two years with Paul in Caesarea. Luke then had leisure to make his researches (in Palestine) about the life of Jesus. He would also have Paul's help. In that case the Gospel would come before A.D. 60. Otherwise it may come as late as 80 A.D. The earlier date is on the whole the most probable.

Characteristics of Luke's Gospel.—Reason for writing given—1:1-4. It is the historical ground that many others had written about Jesus. He wishes to give Theophilus (cf. Acts also) the benefit of his researches into the life of Jesus. Theophilus is probably a real character, a man of some importance.

Editorial Notes.—A. Wright (St. Luke's Gospel in Greek, Art. Luke—Hastings' D. B.) finds many editorial comments in Luke. This is natural in a true historian who is not a mere copyist in the use of his material. There is evidence of much reflection and theological interpretation in Luke as in Matthew and John.

Doctrinal Tendency.—Luke's Gospel is not an objective realistic setting forth of the facts of the life of Christ as in Mark. The facts are there, but they are interpreted. This is in truth a higher form of history. There is no perversion of the facts to advance the cause of Paul against Peter as Baur charged.

Pauline Influence.—The book does correspond in theological outlook with that of Paul, as seen in his Epistles. Luke was greatly indebted to Paul (cf. Mk. also). There is nothing hostile to Peter in the Gospel, and the Gospel has many stern judgments of the Jews; cf. Plummer, Comm. p. 26. The Gospel is not a theological polemic; 101 words occur only in Luke and Paul in the New Testament.

Historical Allusions.—The Gospel (Acts more so) has reference to the general history of the times as one would expect from a man of the Greek world like Luke. Cf. Luke 3:1 ff., where he mentions the imperial and provincial, as well as the ecclesiastical, rulers of the time when John the Baptist began his work. Cf. 13:1 ff. for an incident of the rule of Pontius Pilate.

Universal Outlook.—As a Greek Christian, familiar with Paul's work in the Roman Empire and his plans for the evangelization of the Roman world, Luke naturally shows sympathy with the wider aspects of the work of Christ. His Gospel is for the Gentiles as well as for the Jews. He traces the genealogy of Christ back to Adam. He seems to give the real lineage of Jesus through his mother Mary. He notes that Jesus is enrolled along with Joseph and Mary according to the regulations of the Roman emperor Augustus. He records the song of peace for men of good will at the birth of Jesus (Lu. 2:14).

Infancy of Jesus from Mary's Point of View.—As Matthew gives the birth of Jesus from the standpoint of Joseph in harmony with the Jewish character of his Gospel, so Luke records the universal interest of humanity in the birth of Jesus as seen in the experience of Mary. The source of Luke's information was probably oral and must have come ultimately from Mary herself, but Luke probably obtained the story from a friend of Mary.

First Christian Hymnologist.—Thus Farrar (Messages of the Books) aptly describes Luke's Hymns of the Nativity, Songs of Elisabeth, Mary, Zacharias. They bear the stamp of genuineness in the strongly marked Semitic tone and style. Luke was himself a Greek, but he has preserved the Hebrew spirit of the original source. Chaps. 1 and 2 differ greatly in style from the introduction (1:1-4) and from the rest of the Gospel.

Arrangement chronological.—So in the main as he explained in 1:3; many of the incidents recorded have no special sequence, and Luke may not have known the real chronological order. Cf. Plummer, Comm. p. 37. This was Luke's method in the Acts and strengthens the opinion that he followed the same method in the Gospel.

Series of Pictures.—In the development of his narrative Luke shows much artistic skill. Each incident has a setting more or less distinct. The circumstances, time and place are roughly sketched. Usually the time element is very vague: as about that time, at that very hour, &c. But each incident, miracle or parable is treated as a whole. Sometimes no connection in the series is indicated.

Luke's Special Contribution.—The largest part of the Gospel (9:51-19; 27, the last six months of the ministry of Christ) belongs to the period where we have very little in the other Gospels. Matthew has two chapters (19 and 20), Mark one (10), while John has more (7-11), but matter pertaining to the Jerusalem ministry and different from Luke's account. A good deal of Luke's material is repetition in various details of sayings recorded by Matthew and Mark in the Galilean ministry; and some incidents are parallel. Some scholars think that Luke has here grouped together what really belongs to the Galilean period. It is difficult to think of Luke's doing that. Repetition is common for a teacher. Like teaching also has like results, as every popular preacher knows. Hence Luke has a source for this section different from Mark or the Logia.

Marcion's Use of Luke.—Marcion built his heretical system partly upon Luke's Gospel. He began with Chap. 4 and omitted all portions that did not coincide with his dogmatic views. He was a dogmatic destructive critic of Luke.

Tolerant in Tone.—Luke's breadth of sympathy is revealed in his recording Christ's rebuke of John for his narrowness of spirit (9:49 f.), in the rebuke of the bitterness of John and James toward the Samaritans (9:51-56), in the story of the Good Samaritan (10:30-37), in the gratitude of the Samaritan leper (17:11-19). Luke was truly catholic in spirit.

Gospel of Sympathy.—This appears in a number of ways. The story of the Rich Man and Lazarus (16:19-31) has even led to the charge that Luke was hostile to men of wealth. But this is unjust and a false interpretation. The Pharisees were indignant at the story of the Unjust Steward (16:14), because they loved money greatly. But Luke does present Jesus as the friend of the poor, the sick and the sinful. Jesus here in immortal parables (ch. 15) justifies his work among publicans and sinners. He is not ashamed, according to Luke, to receive the worship of a sinful woman and to cleanse her (7:36-50), but she is not Mary Magdalene, not Mary of Bethany. Luke (8:2) records the work of a group of noble women for Jesus. He mentions more miracles (20) than any other Gospel and more Sabbath cures also. Only six of his miracles are peculiar to Luke. As a physician this is natural, as is his frequent use of medical terms. The gentleness of Christ comes out well in Luke. Cf. 11 Cor. 10:1 f.

Praying of Jesus accented.—This done seven times in Luke when not recorded elsewhere. Thus at His baptism (3:21), collision with the Rulers (5:16), choice of the Apostles (6:12), foretelling His death (9:18), the Transfiguration (19:29), before Teaching the Model Prayer (11:1), on the Cross (23:34, 46). He alone gives some of the Parables about Prayer, like the Friend at Midnight (11:5-13), Unrighteous Judge (18:1-6), Pharisee and Publican (18:11-13). Cf. Plummer, Comm. p. 45 f.

Parables.—Luke has several groups of parables not in Matthew. So the three about the feast (14), the three about Publicans and Pharisees (15), two about riches (16), two about prayer (18). In Matthew the parables are usually concerned with the growth, expansion and communication of the Messianic reign. In Luke the parables of Jesus deal chiefly with the personal aspects of religion. There are twenty-three parables in Luke and all but five are peculiar to him. See "Parables of Jesus," Lu. 2:21.

Versatility.—Luke has the finest literary style and flavor of any of the Gospels, yet he shows most acquaintance with Aramaic sources and the Septuagint. He can be as free from Hebraisms as Plutarch. He has a rich and varied vocabulary, using some seven hundred words in the Gospel and Acts that do not occur elsewhere in the New Testament. Yet he reveals many times, in the Gospel in particular, his Aramaic or Hebrew sources by the idioms which his Greek contains.

Contrasts.—In Luke we have a wide range and many sharp contrasts. See the Publicans and Pharisees in 15, the Rich Man and Lazarus in 16, &c.

Old Testament Quotations.—The chief quotations from the Old Testament are contained in 1:17, 37, 46 f., 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 68, 69, 71, 76, 78, 79; 2:23 f.; 3:4-6; 4:4, 8, 10 f., 12, 18 f.; 6:21; 7:27; 8:10; 10:25; 12:53; 18:20; 19:38, 46; 20:9, 17; 28, 42 f.; 21:20, 22, 25 f., 27; 22:37, 69; 23:46. It will be observed that nearly half of these quotations occur in Chapter 1, the songs of Mary and Zacharias. See p. 1747.

Special Phrases.—Luke is fond of the expression "and it came to pass." So he often uses phrases like "at that very hour." The word "favor," "grace" or "gift" is frequent in Luke as are "Saviour" and "Salvation." It is the longest of the Gospels and the richest in the human side of the life of Jesus. Yet chapter 24 in Luke reveals the deity of Jesus conclusively and beautifully.

Beauty of the Book.—Renan as a critic of style called it the most beautiful book in the world.

Relation to Acts.—It is really Part I of Luke's account of the Origin of Christianity. Acts constitutes Part II (Acts 1:1). See "Article on Acts," Acts 1:1.

Teaching.—The Doctrines of Luke have already been sufficiently indicated. He presents a Universal Gospel of grace in full harmony with the exposition of Paul and indeed of Jesus as presented by Matthew and Mark.

used in the New Testament to describe the supernatural works of Christ on earth the three most usual are applied also to those wrought by His Apostles, viz. (1) teras, A.V. wonder (always); (2) semeion, A.V. sign miracle (esp. in St. John), etc.; (3) dynamis, A.V. power, miracle (esp. in Acts and Epistles), etc.; (1) teras (i.e. 'wonder,' 'portent,' describes a miracle's startling effect, and is always accompanied by another of these words, esp. by semeion, to indicate the moral intention, the end and purpose of the wonder (e.g. in A.V. 'wonders and signs,' Acts 2:22). (2) Semeion, i.e. 'a sign' describes a miracle as ordained by God to be a mark whereby to identify the Messiah, an attestation of His teaching, an earnest of the blessings He brought, a specimen of God's methods for bringing these blessings home to man, as well as a type (or 'parable in action') of His spiritual Gifts. (3) Dynamis, i.e. 'power' (so rendered in A.V., also, generally in plural, 'mighty works'), describes a miracle as a 'new and higher force,' or power of the world to come (Heb. 6:5), entered upon and working in this world; an 'outcoming of the greatness' (megaleia, A.V. 'great things,' Lu. 1:49; Acts 2:1), of God's power and glory inherent in Christ, and lent to His witnesses and ambassadors.

"Miracles are also described at (4) eudoxa, A.V. 'glorious things,' Lu. 13:17, etc., i.e. as manifestations of the glory of God, the Father and Son; (5) paradoxa (A.V. 'strange things'), cp. 'new thing,' Num. 16:30), i.e. as beyond human imagination, amazing (cp. Lu. 5:26), and as (6) thaumasia, A.V. 'wonderful' (Mt. 21:15; cp. Mt. 9:8), i.e. astonishing, occurrences unprecedented in human experience (cp. Mt. 9:33), and (like paradoxa) ascribable to God only."—TRENCH.

"PARABLE is the Greek word parabole, which means juxtaposition, and so a comparison of objects, to show a certain likeness or similitude between them. The Jewish method of teaching by parables was apparently adopted by our Lord when the Jews had rejected His direct teaching (Mt. 13:13); but also out of compassionate consideration for the infirmities of the listeners (cp. 11 Cor. 8:12). Proposed as a spiritual riddle to call the spiritual perceptions into exercise, the Parable—either attracted, interested, provoked inquiry, and thus sowed seed in the memory for future development by Christ Himself or by the Holy Ghost (cp. John 14:26); or left the self-righteous and obdurate self-condemned to spiritual blindness (John 9:30-41; 12:48). Thus the parable sifted the audience, and 'found out the willing hearers and led them on'; like the Shechinah (Ex. 14:20), it was light and guidance to God's children, but darkness and a hindrance to His opponents.—Mk. 4:10-13, 33, 34; cp. John 3:19; 7:17; 8:43."

"CHRIST'S PARABLES illustrate the nature and principles of the Gospel Dispensation (the Mysteries, i.e. revealed secrets of the Kingdom of Heaven). They have been divided into three groups, according to the part of His Ministry in which they were delivered—viz.:

1. The earliest—Mt. 13; Mk. 4. Illustrations from common facts of Nature.
2. Between the mission of the Seventy and His last journey to Jerusalem. Illustrations of family and social life.
3. Immediately before and after His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. In answer to questions, cavils, etc."

HIS KINGDOM.—"It is only when we take the fourfold narrative in its entirety that we begin to catch sight of the satisfying and convincing fulness of the idea of the kingdom of heaven. This idea underlies the whole Gospel of John. In the Synoptic Gospels we have the conditions of entrance into the kingdom, a childlike spirit, faith, repentance, and obedience—Mt. 18:3; 9:22; 5:20; Lu. 13:3. In John we have the spiritual birth by which alone those conditions are made possible—John 3:5. In the Synoptics we have the laws of the kingdom—Mt. 5-7. In John we have the new life in which alone those laws can be fulfilled—John 6:22-65. In the Synoptics we have the parables and pictures of the kingdom—Mt. 13, etc. In John we have the inmost sense of those parables, spoken directly to the soul, in words of which Christ Himself says 'they are spirit, and they are life.' In the Synoptics we have the new order of human society in the imitation by the disciples of Christ's obedience to the will of God—Mt. 12:50. In John we have the organizing principle of that new order in Christ's revelation of Himself to the disciples as the way, the truth, and the life—John 14:6. In the Synoptics we have the supremacy of Christ's example over men's hearts. In John we have the supremacy of Christ's teachings over men's minds."—HENRY VAN DYKE.

"Put together the Sermon on the Mount, the Charge to the Twelve Apostles, the Parables of the Kingdom, the Discourse in the Supper-room, and the institution of the two great Sacraments, and the plan of our Saviour is before you. And it is enunciated with an accent of calm, unflinching conviction that it will be realized in human history."—HENRY P. LUDON.

Not to fall, amid Temptations, is Victory and Joy.—Jas. 1:2, 12. It is right to overcome Error—Heb. 3:12-15; II Pet. 3:17. Christ can keep from falling—Rom. 16:25; I Cor. 10:13; I Cor. 12:9; Jude 24. Many Warnings against—Mt. 6:13; Mk. 13:9; 14:38; I Cor. 3:16, 17; II Thess. 2:3; Heb. 2:1-4; 3:1-4; 13; 6:1-8; 10:26-31; 12:15-29; 13:7-13; Jas. 1:13-15; Rev. 2:4, 6, 22-26.

Confidence in God's Elective Grace.—John 6:37, 39; 17:12; Rom. 8:26; 11:36; Eph. 1:3-14; I Thess. 1:4; Heb. 6:9-20; I Pet. 1:3-5; II Pet. 1:10, 11.

Proof of Election is Perseverance to the End.—Heb. 3:6-14. Paul opposed Presumption of the Believers—I Cor. 9:23; 10:22. The Case of Judas is one who let the Devil into his Life—John 6:70; 13:2, 27. Jesus foresaw His Destiny—John 6:64. And Judas went out to his own Place—Acts 1:25.

Many Difficulties in the Subject of Apostasy.—Is one Aspect of Human Free Agency. The True Believer is confident of God's Power and Purpose to keep him to the End, but does not rashly rush into Temptation. The Test of Real Life is in the End of the Day, as Jesus said in His Sermon on the Mount—Mt. 7:14-23.

27 <sup>b</sup> And there came to him certain of the <sup>c</sup> Sād<sup>4</sup>dū-qēes, they that say that there is no <sup>d</sup> resur-

There were therefore <sup>o</sup> seven the second: 31 and the third took her; and likewise the seven also left no children, and died.

32 Afterward the <sup>p</sup> woman also died. 33 In the resurrection therefore whose wife of them shall she be? for the seven had her to wife. 34 And Jē<sup>5</sup>šūs said

7 <sup>n</sup> And the day of unleavened bread came, on which <sup>o</sup> the passover must be <sup>p</sup> sacrificed. 8 And

In fishing business with father and brother James at Capernaum—Mt. 4:21. Home in Jerusalem also—John 19:27. Acquainted with family of Annas—John 18:13. Not very poor; had hired servants—Mk. 1:20. Cf. possible reference to his mother in Lu. 8:3. Possibly younger than brother James—Mt. 4:21; 10:2. Disciple of John the Baptist in all probability—John 1:40. Mentions name of Andrew and implies that the other disciple of John is himself. Probably this is one of the two disciples who first followed Jesus—John 1:35 f. Probably led brother James to Christ—John 1:41. This is not clearly stated, but probable. One of the four fishermen later called to personal service—Mt. 4:21 f. Belongs to the first of the three groups of the Apostles—Mt. 10:2 f.; Mk. 3:16 f.; Lu. 6:14 f.; Acts 1:13 f. One of the minor circle of three present at the raising of Jairus's daughter (Mk. 5:37), the Transfiguration (Lu. 9:28), the agony in Gethsemane (Mk. 14:33). Ambitious for position—Mt. 19:20. Willing for baptism of blood in ignorance of it—Mt. 20:22. Had no rabbinical education—Acts 4:13. Nicknamed Boanerges along with James (Sons of thunder)—Mk. 3:17. Proof of vehemence of nature: Vindictive toward the Samaritans—Lu. 9:51. Shows spirit of narrowness toward other workers for Christ—Mk. 9:38. Possibly kin to the Bethany family—John chap. 11. Messenger with Peter to prepare for the last Passover—Lu. 22:8. Had post of honor at the meal, reclining next to Christ—John 13:25. Favorite term for himself in the Gospel is "the disciple whom Jesus loved"—John 13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20. Asked Jesus who the betrayer was—John 13:25. One of the three in search for Christ in Gethsemane—Mt. 26:37. Entered the court of the high priest at the trial of Jesus—John 18:15. Alone of the Apostles; also stood by the Cross—John 19:26.

Honored by Jesus with care of His Mother—John 19:27. Saw proof of the death of Jesus and of His real humanity—John 19:35. Visits tomb of Jesus with Peter—John 20:4. Recognizes Jesus by Sea of Galilee—John 21:7. Peter misunderstands Christ's remark about John's living long—John 2:21. With Peter in worship in the Temple after the coming of the Holy Spirit—Acts 3:1. Shows boldness before the Sanhedrin—Acts 4:13. Receives Samaritan Christians as brethren (cf. wishing to call down fire before)—Acts 8:14. Escapes death when his brother James is slain—Acts 12:2. One of the chief figures in the Jerusalem conference, and gives Paul the right hand of fellowship and approval in his work—Gal. 2:9. Lived to old age—I John 2:1, 18. Travels much—I John 10. Banished to Patmos—Rev. 1:9. Interest in the Seven Churches of Asia (Rev. 1:11) suggests previous residence in Ephesus in harmony with tradition. Much more known about John in the Gospels and Acts where the twelve as a whole are mentioned. Tradition adds much more. Irenaeus says expressly that John lived till the time of Trajan, who reigned 98–117. John is a link between the first and third generations of Christians.

Character.—Marked by energy, love, elevation, and spiritual insight. Lived long and reflected profoundly on the great aspects of Christ and Christianity. Probably a celibate. Known as John the Theologian, John the Eagle.

GOSPEL OF JOHN: Authorship.—The writer refers to himself as the disciple whom Jesus loved and never mentions his name. Cf. Luke's "we" sections in Acts. The writer was a Jew, lived in Jerusalem, was an eye-witness of most that he records, was one of the close disciples of Jesus. He was John, since Peter and James are ruled out.

Date.—After the Synoptic Gospels, and probably a good while after them. Somewhere about A.D. 90.

Place not known.—But assuming the Ephesian residence of John, Ephesus was probably the place. Cf. possible endorsement of Ephesian elders to the book ("we know"—John 21:24.)

Occasion.—The spread of Gnosticism in Asia (cf. Paul's Epistles to the Colossians and Ephesians) made John anxious to correct the perverted views of the person of Christ.

Purpose.—Stated by the author himself in John 20:30 f. He offers proof from the miracles of Jesus that He is the Son of God.

Person of Christ.—Jesus—God (John 1:1) and man (1:14) both. He had real blood (19:34), and He is the only begotten Son (1:18).

Pre-existence of the Word.—Christ as God's Son existed before His human birth—1:1; 17:5.

Prologue.—John 1:1-18 is a remarkable theological interpretation by the author of the twofold nature of Christ, a forecast of the entire Gospel.

Argument.—21:19-20:31 the author discusses the proof of the Incarnation of the God-Man.

Epilogue.—Chap. 21 is by way of addition after the argument was made.

Manifestation of the Messiah.—The body of the book shows how Jesus progressively revealed Himself as the Messiah.

Development of Hostility.—The hatred of Christ's enemies grows with His self-revelation.

Style.—John writes as an old man after long reflection and contemplation. He has much repetition and even monotony of manner, but the calm elevation of style suits his introspective insight.

Dialogues.—The book is remarkable for vivid dialogue, as in chaps. 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7-10, 11, 12, 13-17, 21. In 15 and 16 monologue appears. In 17 the wonderful prayer.

Narratives.—Beautiful narratives occur also in chaps. 1, 2, 4, 11, 21.

Historical Value.—This Gospel has been fiercely attacked as of little historical worth because the style in the dialogues is practically the same as that of the narrative portions. Hence the whole is put by some on a lower plane than the Synoptic Gospels. But none of the Gospels give verbatim reports of the exact Aramaic speeches of Jesus. John gives the sense rather more freely probably, but still he correctly interprets Jesus' miracles. Only eight miracles occur in this Gospel, but several of them are treated at some length and become the occasion of extended address to the people. Cf. John Chaps. 5, 6, 9, 21.

Resurrection of Lazarus.—This famous passage (ch. 11) is bitterly attacked by those who deny the deity of Jesus. Probably Lazarus was still alive when the Synoptic Gospels were written, and hence they did not refer to it. They do give resurrections from the dead by Jesus.

Parables.—No parable occurs in John except brief proverbs or crisp sayings like that in John 2:19, and the allegory of the Good Shepherd in Chap. 10, and the Vine and the Branches in Chap. 15. These symbols (door, shepherd, vine, &c.) are essentially parables.

Demons.—No demoniacs are recorded as healed in this Gospel, though the word occurs, John 8:48.

The Jews.—The author, though a Jew, wrote after the direction of Jerusalem and probably in Ephesus long after the line was sharply drawn between the Jews and the Christians. Hence he refers to the Jews as hostile to Jesus. Cf. Chaps. 7, 8, 9, &c.

The Samaritans.—A good deal about them. Cf. John the Baptist's ministry there (ch. 3:23). Woman at Well of Sychar (ch. 4). Jewish sneer at Samaritans (8:48).

Testimony of the Baptist.—In John Chap. 1. Much not elsewhere about the Baptist's testimony to Jesus.

Relation to Synoptics.—Entirely new matter, save feeding of the Five Thousand (ch. 6) and Passover Week (18-20).

Supplementary, not contradictory.—Evidently written in full view of the Synoptic Gospels and gives additional and confirmatory matter. Picture of Jesus essentially the same.—In the Synoptic Gospels (cf. Warfield's "Lord of Glory," Denney's "Jesus and the Gospel") Jesus is both divine and human. The human side of Jesus is prominent also in the Fourth Gospel (cf. ch. 4, 6, 12).

First Year of Ministry.—But for John's Gospel the entire first year of Christ's active work would be unknown.

Feasts and Chronology.—John mentions three Passovers in the Lord's ministry (2:13; 6:4; 13:1). Hence the ministry

6 This <sup>g h i</sup> parable spake Jē'sūs unto them: but they <sup>j</sup> understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.
7 Jē'sūs therefore said unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am <sup>k</sup> the door of the <sup>l</sup> sheep. 8 All that came <sup>m</sup> before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them. 9 <sup>n</sup> I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and go out, and shall find <sup>o</sup> pasture. 10 The <sup>p</sup> thief cometh not, but that he may steal, and <sup>q</sup> kill, and <sup>r</sup> destroy: I <sup>s</sup> came that they <sup>t</sup> may have <sup>u</sup> life, and may <sup>v</sup> have <sup>w</sup> it abundantly. 11 <sup>x</sup> I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd <sup>y</sup> layeth down his life for the sheep. 12 He that is a <sup>z</sup> hireling, and not a shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, beholdeth the <sup>a</sup> wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth, and come and take away both our<sup>a</sup> place and our<sup>b</sup> nation. 49 But a certain one of them, <sup>c</sup>Cā'jā-phās, being <sup>d</sup>high priest that <sup>e</sup>year, said unto them, Ye <sup>f</sup>know nothing at all, 50 nor do ye take account that <sup>h</sup>it is expedient for you that one <sup>i</sup>man should <sup>j</sup>die <sup>k</sup>for the people, and that the whole nation perish not. 51 Now this he said not of himself: but being high priest that year, he <sup>l</sup>in <sup>m</sup>prophesied that Jē'z'sūs should die <sup>o</sup>for the nation; 52 and not for the nation only, but that he might also <sup>p</sup>gather together into <sup>q</sup>one the <sup>r</sup>children of God that are scattered abroad. 53 So from that <sup>t</sup>day forth they <sup>u</sup>took counsel that they might put him to death.

I send receiveth <sup>a</sup> me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jē-šūs had thus said, he <sup>b</sup> was troubled in the <sup>c</sup> spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that <sup>d</sup> one of you shall <sup>e</sup> betray me. 22 The <sup>f</sup> disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake. 23 There was at the <sup>g</sup> <sup>h</sup> <sup>i</sup> table reclining in <sup>j</sup> Jē-šūs' bosom one of his disciples, <sup>k</sup> <sup>l</sup> whom Jē-šūs <sup>m</sup> loved. 24 <sup>n</sup> Si- mōn Peter therefore beckoneth to him, and saith unto him, Tell <sup>us</sup> who it is of whom he speaketh. 25 He <sup>o</sup> leaning back, as he was, on Jē-šūs' breast saith unto him, <sup>p</sup> Lord, who is it? 26 Jē-šūs therefore answereth, He it is, for whom I shall dip the sop, and give it him. So when he had dipped the sop, he taketh and giveth it to Jū-dās, <sup>q</sup> the son of <sup>r</sup> Si-mōn Īs-ē-ā-ōt. 27 And after the sop, then <sup>s</sup> <sup>t</sup> entered <sup>u</sup> Satan into him. Jē-šūs therefore saith unto him, What thou doest, do quickly. 28 Now no <sup>v</sup> man at the table <sup>w</sup> knew for what intent he spake this unto him. 29 For some <sup>x</sup> thought, because Jū-dās <sup>y</sup> had the <sup>2</sup> bag,

* ACTS OF THE APOSTLES: Tide.—Not in all the early manuscripts and, in truth, it is not an exact description of the book. Most of the Twelve Apostles are not referred to after chap. 2, and the bulk of the book recounts the work of other than the Twelve, as Stephen and Philip (6-8), Barnabas (11), and Paul (9, 13-28). Besides, a number of speeches occur also by Peter, Stephen, Paul. But the title is not likely to be displaced by a better one, if such an one could be found.

Author.—He is the same as the author of the Gospel according to Luke (Acts 1:1), to which book he alludes. He is a companion of Paul (Acts 16:10) and a physician. It is now demonstrated that Luke is the author of both Gospel and Acts.

Theophilus.—He is called "most excellent" (Lu. 1:3), and probably was a man of some standing. "The Acts," as the "Gospel," was intended not merely for his personal but for general circulation, especially among the Gentile Christians. Luke had in mind the same circle of readers for both books.

Date.—It was written after the Gospel, though how long after is not known. Critics do not agree; but it is probable on the whole that Acts was written by Luke in Rome while with Paul during his first imprisonment. This would explain best the sudden close of Acts with Paul still prisoner (28:30 f.), after two years in Rome in his own hired house.

Two Possible Editions.—Lightfoot suggested that Luke made two editions of both Gospel and Acts. Blass holds that in the Acts he issued a rough first edition (text of D), and then revised it for Theophilus and sent it east (text of B). The revised he considers a briefer text. The point is still in dispute.

Relation to Luke's Gospel.—The Acts is a continuation of the Gospel. Indeed the same event, the Ascension, closes one book and opens the other. Luke considers that it is the same story "concerning all that Jesus began, both to do and to teach" (Acts 1:1).

Relation to Paul's Epistles.—There is no mention of any of Paul's Epistles in the Acts. It is not certain that Luke had seen any of them when he wrote the book. If he wrote in Rome about A.D. 63, the Pastoral Epistles had not, of course, been written. The Epistles of the First Imprisonment had been sent on their mission. The other Epistles were sent to Thessalonica, Corinth, Galatia, Rome. The one to Rome he could have seen. The one to Galatia he probably did not see. Thessalonica and Corinth were not far from Philippi. The account of the installation of the Lord's Supper in Lu. 22:17-20 is quite similar to that in 1 Cor. 11:23-26. Paul claims to have had a direct revelation from the Lord on the subject (1 Cor. 11:23). Luke may indeed have seen Paul's narrative. But, however this may be, the Acts and the Epistles supplement each other in a truly marvellous manner. Cf. Paley, "Hore Pauline," and Knowling, "The Witness of the Epistles." The absence of references makes the supplementing all the more striking. There are difficulties as concerning Acts 15 and Gal. 2, but they are not insuperable.

Sources.—In the Gospel (1:1-4) Luke tells the character of the material used. As a competent historian we merely assume that he used the same care in writing Acts. He was himself a witness of part of the narrative and he there speaks in the first person—16:10-40; 20:6-28:31. We do not know his sources for the remainder of the book, but it is not difficult to guess it in part. For all of Paul's career sketched by Luke he had Paul himself with whom Luke was so long as in Caesarea and Rome. Then, besides, John Mark was in Rome with Luke and could tell much about the early apostolic era. Luke saw also Mnason, an early disciple—21:16. He was the guest of Philip in Caesarea (Acts 21:8), besides the long stay in Caesarea. Luke saw James, the Lord's brother, in Jerusalem (21:18), who was present in Jerusalem continuously since the Great Day of Pentecost. Cf. Knowling, "Expositor's Greek Testament." It is plain that he had ample material.

Choice of Material.—The principles that governed Luke in the use of the abundant material are not made plain to us in the book. One feels sure that accuracy and interest were two of them. He begins with Jerusalem, which, not Galilee, is now the centre of Christian life. Then he extends the circle to Samaria and Philistia. Then the Gentiles come in, and the whole Roman Empire is brought within the horizon. The book closes at Rome, the Capital of the Empire.

Main Personages.—The work expands through new agents. At Jerusalem the Holy Spirit falls upon the 120 and Peter is the leading spirit ably supported by John. Peter and John arouse the antagonism of the Sadducees by reason of the preaching of the resurrection of Jesus. But Stephen, not one of the Twelve, stirs the Pharisees to activity by his accent on the spiritual nature of worship. Philip, another of the Seven Deacons, carries the gospel to Samaria and Philistia. Peter and Barnabas (after the men of Cyprus and Cyrene) are the early instruments in starting the work among the Gen-high favor as a reliable historian. See Chase, "The Credibility of Acts"; Ramsay, "St. Paul the Traveller."

Speeches in Acts.—In particular the speeches in Acts are said to be made to order by Luke. But Luke heard Paul's speech at Miletus (ch. 20) and those in Jerusalem, Caesarea, and Rome—chs. 21-28. The speeches of Paul at Antioch in Pisidia (ch. 13) and at Athens (ch. 17) may very well have been preserved by Paul in notes and suit marvellously the conditions. In like manner Luke may have gotten notes of Peter's addresses, and Paul heard Stephen's—Ch. 7. There is no real ground for disputing the accuracy of their addresses without insisting on a verbatim report.

Three Parts of Acts.—The book falls naturally into three parts. One has Jerusalem for a centre (chs. 1-12); another has Antioch as a centre (chs. 13:1-21:15); the other shows Paul battling with his enemies in Jerusalem, Caesarea, Rome—chs. 21:15-28:31. These are thus shifting centres of Christian influence. The power of Christianity follows the line of missionary activity, not of mere verbal orthodoxy.

Picture of Jesus in Acts.—Jesus had said that the Holy Spirit would teach the disciples about Him. In "The Acts" we see the disciples expounding the work and words of Jesus. After the great Pentecost they are able to interpret Jesus to men with power. They use His Resurrection in connection with His claims to prove His messiahship. They worship Him as Lord and Saviour. The Epistology of the Acts is essentially the same as that of the Epistles and harmonizes with the claims of Jesus in the Gospels.

Conversion of Saul.—The two outstanding events in the Acts are the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and the conversion of Saul of Tarsus. These two events explain the story of the book and, indeed, largely explain the history of early Christianity.

Personality of Paul.—The figure of Paul dominates the book as he has largely dominated (and rightly so) Christian history since the first century.

Voyage to Rome.—Chapter 27 is a notable contribution to the world's knowledge of ancient seafaring apart from one's interest in Paul, the most important source indeed for that knowledge.

Chronology of Acts.—Luke mentions several rulers like Herod Agrippa (death, ch. 12) and Felix and Festus. But it is not very easy to work out a consistent chronology of the events in Acts. As a working hypothesis we may assume that Paul was with Barnabas at Antioch about A. D. 44, and that Festus succeeded Felix A. D. 59 or 60.

Old Testament Quotations.—They are found in Acts 1:20; 2:17-21, 23-28; 3:22 f. (cf. 7:37); 25; 4:25, 26; 7:3, 5, 6 f.; 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 f.; 17-19, 20 f.; 22, 23-29, 30, 31, 32, 33 f.; 35, 37, 40, 44, 46 f.; 49 f.; 8:32 f.; 13:17-21, 22, 25, 33, 34, 41, 47; 14:15 (17:24); 15:16 f.; 17:31; 23:5; 26:18, 22 f.; 28:26 f.

Acts and the Epistles of Paul.—It is clear that the Acts was written by Luke in complete independence of the Epistles of Paul. It is hardly probable that Luke while at Philippi saw the Thessalonian Epistles or the Corinthian group. It is reasonably clear that he had not seen Galatians when he wrote Acts 15. In Gal. chap. 2, Paul gives the private account of the Jerusalem Conference to show his independence of the Twelve, though showing his essential agreement with them. In Acts chap. 15, Luke gives the general recital of the public aspects of the meeting, but with hints of friction (Acts 15:4 f.). It is possible that Luke was the amanuensis of Paul during the first Roman Captivity—Col. 4:14. If so, he would be familiar with the contents and style of these Epistles. It is just in these letters that we find most similarity between Acts and Paul's Epistles. But on the whole it may be said that the Epistles were written in independence of the Acts and the Acts in independence of the Epistles. The Epistles of the captivity do not touch the period covered by the Acts, save the two years in Rome—Acts 28:30.

Luke may have had the benefit of Paul's suggestions at many points for the latter part of Acts, as he may have received help from John Mark and Philip for the earlier portions, not to mention notes of the various addresses which Luke did not himself hear. But there is no apparent effort to harmonize Acts with the Epistles. Still they supplement each other in a marvellous manner. Wherever they touch they must be blended to get the full light. Paul is intent on the problems in hand when he writes his Epistles. Luke has in mind the movements of Christianity in its expanding progress and selects his material for his own purpose. Luke gives us a real history, though along a line of his own choosing.

† GRECIAN, or GREEK-SPEAKING JEWS.—In Acts 6:1 a distinction is made between the Christian Jews who belonged to the Dispersion and spoke Greek (Hellenists), and the Christian Jews who were Palestinians and spoke Aramaic (He-brews). The term Hellenist occurs also in Acts 9:29 for Jews of the Dispersion now in Jerusalem; while in Acts 11:20 the Revised Version (American) correctly reads "Greeks also,"

<sup>b</sup>good <sup>c</sup>tidings, that ye should <sup>d</sup>turn from these <sup>e</sup>vain things unto a <sup>f</sup>living God, who <sup>g</sup>made the <sup>h</sup>heaven and the <sup>i</sup>earth and the <sup>j</sup>sea, and all that in them is:
16 who in the generations gone by <sup>m</sup>suffered all the <sup>n</sup>nations to <sup>p</sup>walk in their own ways.
17 And yet <sup>r</sup>he left not himself without <sup>s</sup>witness, in that <sup>t</sup>he did good and <sup>u</sup>gave you from heaven <sup>v</sup>rains and <sup>w</sup>fruitful <sup>y</sup>seasons, filling your <sup>z</sup>hearts with <sup>a</sup>food and <sup>b</sup>gladness. 18
And with these sayings scarce restrained they the multitudes from doing <sup>c</sup>sacrifice unto them.

19 But there came <sup>d</sup>Jews thither from <sup>e</sup>Ān-ti-ōch and <sup>f</sup>Ī-eō-ni-ūm: and having persuaded the multitudes, they <sup>g</sup>stoned <sup>h</sup>Paul, and dragged him out of the <sup>i</sup>city, supposing that he was <sup>n</sup>dead. 20 But as <sup>o</sup>the <sup>p</sup>disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and entered into the city: and on the morrow he went forth with <sup>q</sup>Bār-nā-bās to <sup>r</sup>Dēr-bē. 21 And
